

Licence

The article is original, does not infringe the copyright of others, and has not been published in either paper or electronic form. It has not been submitted for publication elsewhere, and is not part of another publication.

The article was written without a conflict of interest between the author (authors) and other institutions, companies, or organisations.

The royalty-free, non-exclusive and unlimited in time and geographical territory licence to use the article is granted to the Krakow University of Economics, in the following fields:

- 1) preservation and reproduction of the article, by any method chosen, including but not limited to, printing (publication of the article published in book form), digital/electronic format, without restrictions as to the manner and form of the digital/electronic recording and its preservation,
- 2) dissemination of the article in an electronic version via open access under the Creative Commons (CC BY 4.0) on the Internet (on-line), including the digital platform of the magazines of Krakow University of Economics and a repository of the Krakow University of Economics, without restrictions as to the place and time of access,
- 3) the inclusion of the article and a summary of it in electronic databases/data sets available through multimedia networks, for example: the Internet, the Intranet,
- 4) dissemination of the article published in book form by any means, including but not limited to, selling, renting, leasing, without any limits with regard to time or territory,
- 5) the use of the article or parts thereof in various forms of promotion and advertising, as well as the right to use the article for educational or training purposes, in any media (i.e. print, digital, electronic) in existence at the time the contract is signed.

Krakow University of Economics is entitled to edit the article and its summary and to make corrections resulting from editorial work.

Krakow University of Economics is entitled to verify the originality of the article using the Crossref Similarity Check service powered by iThenticate.